Welcome to Moscow!

You've arrived at Sheremetyevo – the largest airport in Russia.

Sheremetyevo has repeatedly been recognised as the best airport in Europe for client service and was named the “travellers’ favourite airport” by TripAdvisor.

The very first steps in a new city are the ones that matter most. Even if you have read several travel guides, marked with your own hand the most interesting places on the map and scheduled every hour of your trip, you will still be agitated in an unfamiliar city.

You did just right now, when you picked up this guide. First, it is indeed short. Put it in your pocket and it will be all along with you while you stay in Moscow. Second, it is helpful. Here you will find all the information you need for a comfortable trip. Third, it is free and is available in three languages.

Moscow is an amazing city. You must have already suspected this and now we will show this to you.

You are always welcome here!

Tickets

In metro ticket offices or ticket kiosks, you can buy an all-in-one ticket to use in all types of public transport. The two most popular types of ticket are the «Ediny» (All-In-One) (for one trip by metro or land transport) and the «90 minutes» (which allows you to do unlimited trips by land transport and one trip by metro within 90 minutes). The tickets cost 55₽ and 65₽, respectively. You can buy a ticket for the same price directly from the driver. However, drivers sell only the Ediny ticket for one trip.

If you have come to Moscow for more than 3 or 4 days, it makes sense to buy the «Troika» transportation card. One trip paid with the Troika card would cost only 35₽. You can buy the card and top up the balance in metro ticket offices or in automatized machines and land kiosks.

Metro

Everybody knows that Moscow has the most beautiful metro in the world. Metro is also the most convenient means of public transportation in Moscow. It is true that during rush hours (from 7 till 10 in the morning and from 6 till 8 in the evening) the metro can be overcrowded. You will find the map of the Moscow metro on page 2–3.

Taxi

The vast majority of legal taxi drivers in Moscow use the following three aggregators: Yandex. Taxi, Gett and Uber. If you have any of the above apps installed on your smartphone, you will not have any problem with taxis in Moscow: either in terms of language or security. The prices offered by the three aggregators are not the same but alike: you will pay 350–500₽ for a 30-minute economy ride. Apart from rush hours, waiting for a taxi will take no more than 10 minutes. Two important things: you can still find legal taxis that are not painted in the habitual yellow and that do not have the taxi sign on top (and most Uber taxis are like that). Do not worry about this. And, second, if you do wave down a taxi on the street, you better negotiate the price at the very beginning.

Money

The official currency of Russia is ruble and this has long been no formality. By all means, it cannot be ruled out that, in some antique shop in the Arbat, they will happily accept your dollars or euros (if the amount is big enough); however, generally you will not be able to buy anything in Moscow with foreign cash. Currency exchange kiosks and ATM machines are located at every turn (in the city centre, at least) and it is safe to use them (however, just in case, you better change your money in a bank even if the exchange rate there is less appealing). Currency exchange kiosks, bank branches and ATMs are located in every terminal of the airport, where you can send and receive money transfers, buy currency or withdraw cash.

Money, safety and conduct

Safety

In general, Moscow is a perfectly safe city, where the police work well and street crimes are on a quite low level. By all means, same as in any other metropolis, you should be aware of pickpockets and stay away from prohibited entertainments such as prostitution or drugs. Unlike other world capitals, there are no particularly ill-famed locality in Moscow. However, a foreigner, who does not speak Russian, would be, for sure, running a greater risk at night somewhere in the outskirts of the city rather than at noon on Red Square. Being prudent would not be out of place at night clubs either. However, in general, if a tourist is sober and friendly, he will be safe in Moscow.

How not to offend others

Moscow is a modern secular European city where no strict rules of public behaviour apply. However, Muscovites are somewhat conservative and demonstrating passionately one’s political or religious beliefs or sexual identity in public could be taken by others with disapproval. In Moscow, it is prohibited to consume alcoholic drinks in public. Police are strictly monitoring abuses and no paper packs would pass for a camouflage of a bottle.

Smoking is prohibited near metro stations, schools, hospitals, at stadiums and in any premises, apart from one’s own apartment. Smoking is also prohibited in cafes and restaurants.

In any emergency call

112

One more piece of advice for our foreign guests: in Moscow, same as everywhere in Russia, you are supposed to give place to women and elderly people in transport.

Bank card

VISA and MasterCard cards are accepted virtually everywhere and soon, according to the Moscow authorities, there will be no shop or cafe where you would not be able to pay by card. Moscow open markets are the only places where they accept cash only.

Ten must-see places

The Kremlin and the Red Square
Don’t listen to snobs: the Kremlin and the Red Square are indeed the best places in Moscow. The Kremlin is the largest existing fortress town in the world. It is the most beautiful and precious (from the historic point of view) attraction in Moscow and the only one that should not be missed for sure even if you came to Moscow for as little as just a couple of hours. You can simply take a walk around the Kremlin walls. However, it will be better if you manage to get inside (bear in mind that there is always a queue to get in). Enjoy the phenomenal beauty of the Kremlin cathedrals, the famous Bell Tower of Ivan the Great and the treasures of the Armoury Chamber and the Diamond Treasury. If this is not enough for you, there is Lenin’s Mausoleum in the Red Square. Yes, you can still go in there.

Pushkinskaya (or Pushkin) Square
While the Red Square is the heart of Moscow, the Pushkin Square is the centre of its nervous system. This is where, by the famous statue of Pushkin made by Opekushin, the majority of Muscovites prefer to meet. Three metro stations are located nearby which makes it easy to reach any place in the city from here. The most known Moscow restaurant (named, of course, «Pushkin») is located here, same as the most known food store, which is not named «Pushkinsky», by chance, but «Eliseyvsky». From the Pushkin square, it is convenient to start a leisurely walk along the Boulevard Ring, either to Arbat Street or in the opposite direction, as you wish.

The Cathedral of Christ the Saviour
This magnificent cathedral is considered to be one of Moscow’s main churches. Its prior is nobody else but the very head of the Russian Orthodox church. Important church festive services conducted by the Patriarch are transmitted on the air all over Russia from here. The Cathedral of Christ the Saviour was erected in the mid-19th century to commemorate the soldiers fallen in the 1812 Patriotic War. During Soviet times the cathedral was completely demolished and reconstructed from scratch in the present-day Russia.

The Bolshoy Theatre
They say that you can never freely buy tickets for performances there. While this is not quite true, it is indeed difficult to get into the Bolshoy, especially to see a ballet. In 2011, the theatre was reopened after many years of being on reconstruction and not only does the Bolshoy have now an outstanding company but it also has new buildings and unique technical infrastructure. Well, even if you did not make it to a performance there, you can still go on excursion to see the renowned classicism building, with a chariot on its frontispiece designed by Alberto Cavos.

The Tretyakov Gallery
Together with the Russian Museum in Saint Petersburg, this is the main collection of national art. The collection of Pavel Tretyakov, who was a merchant and gifted the collection to Moscow, is packed with masterpieces: from the main Russian icon of all times – the Trinity by Andrey Rublev, to the works of Repin, Verechagin, Surikov, Vrubel and Serov. Apart from its static exhibition, the Tretyakov Gallery always has interesting temporary expositions.

The Pushkin Museum
Unlike the Tretyakov Gallery, the Pushkin Museum was intended as a Western museum demonstrating the world art. The intention indeed materialised, as its collection includes Cranach and Botticelli, Rembrandt and Poussin. However, the main pearl of the museum is its collection of French impressionists and post-impressionists, including the Red Vineyard near Arles by van Gogh and the Blue Dancers by Dega. And, by all means, there is the Girl on the Ball by Picasso. Many visitors come here specifically to see it, same as Mona Lisa in the Louvre.

The Gorky Park
The park became the most popular open space in Moscow only a couple of years after it was largely reconstructed. They removed tasteless amusements, wisely rearranged the park layout, provided free Wi-Fi and opened quality and cheap fast food outlets here. The Garage Museum is also here, which is the main exhibition space of modern art. One more thing: in the Gorky Park, you not only may but also encouraged to lie down on the grass. The park has the only minus being that, on 28 May and 2 August, the park is flooded with former frontier guards and troopers, respectively. They try to keep an orderly house; however, not everyone would like such a noisy crowd.

The main building of the Moscow State University
If you are not a student, you will not, most likely, make it inside. There is nothing interesting inside the building, apart from, however, the ninth «dean’s» floor. The building designed by Boris Iofan has a truly impeccable exterior. The best place to take a rather close look as the Moscow State University is the observation platform on the Sparrow Hills (Vorobyovy Gory). If you turn around you will see the whole Moscow right in front of you.

The Novodevichy Convent
It is one of the most beatiful convents of Moscow, which has long been open as a regular museum. The legendary and mysterious convent attracts thousands of tourists from all over the world. The Novodevichy convent is a lovely spot to have a walk and contemplate.

Arbat Street
This is probably the most famous Moscow street, full of tourists 24 hours a day. It might be strange but, apart from the Pushkin’s memorial flat, there are actually no notable points of interest here. However, Arbat antique shops are still the best in town.
If you have just a weekend

By all means, three days is too little to see Moscow. However, if you use your time wisely, you will manage to see all important things.

1 Day one

Let’s take that you have a whole day at your disposal. Start with a short walk from Pushkin Square1 and go down towards the Kremlin. You will get an overview of the imperially majestic Tverskaya Street, where it is most pretentious, and see the building of the Moscow City Hall and the statue of Yuri Dolgoruky on the opposite side of the street. In as little as 20 minutes you will reach Manezhnaya (or Manege) Square. Do not let the crowd flow you into the underrground shopping mall here — this one is far from being the best in its kind in Moscow. Red Square2 is waiting for you.

Strange as it might seem, you do not need to see Red Square and the nearby Kremlin all in one day. If no festival, preparation of a concert or construction of a skating-rink (which does not happen often) is taking place on the square, you will be able to peacefully enjoy its enormous size of 24,750 square metres and a circle of surrounding buildings: the Mausoleum, the Historical Museum, the GUM (state universal department store) and the Cathedral of St. Basil the Blessed. Do not forget to see the Calvary (Lobnaye Mesto) and the Monument to Minin and Pozharsky.

If you’ve had enough, take Ilyinka Street to go to the Bolshoy Theatre. It is within a stone’s throw. If you’ve arranged for seeing a performance at the Bolshoy Theatre, it makes sense to wait until the evening. Then, without hesitating twice, descend to the metro and go from the Ploshchad Revolyutsii station to the Smolenskaya station. Visiting the Arbat3 with its street musicians, souvenirs and antique shops is virtually a must for any tourist. Most people walk along the street in the direction «from the center out», but we are urging you to take just the opposite direction. Having walked through the Arbat from Smolenskaya Square down to Arbatskaya Square, take a left, heading towards the boulevards. The Boulevard Ring was built where once there were the walls of the ancient White Town, now demolished. This is one of the nicest places to walk. Make it at least along Nikolsky and Tverskoy Boulevards. At the end you will come to Pushkin Square, where you already know. If you’ve done all the above thoroughly and without rush, it must be high time for a dinner then. The good thing is that, right on the spot, near Pushkin Square, there are numerous places offering food for any taste and budget.

2 Day two

Give it to the Kremlin. Take your time to see the Armoury Chamber4 (the Monomakh’s Cap, the unique collection of gold and silver plates and, by all means, the amazing collections of suits and canopies) and the Diamond Treasury (the big and small imperial crowns, the sceptre topped with the Orlov diamond, the Shakh diamond and the medal Victory). Go inside all the three cathedrals that are open to visitors: the Cathedral of the Assumption5 (Uspensky Sobor), which is the oldest fully preserved building in Moscow, the Cathedral of the Archangel6 (Arkhangelsky Sobor), which accommodates the table tombs of Russian czars, including that of Ivan the Great, and the Cathedral of the Annunciation (Blagoveschensky Sobor), which was the family chapel of Moscow monarchs. Go up the Bell Tower (Kolokolnya) of Ivan the Great (137 steps). Take a walk in the Taynitsky Garden and in a newly laid garden square situated where once there stood a building of the 14th corps, nowadays demolished. There is still the Patriarchal Chambers and the Church of the Deposition of the Robe of the Holy Virgin7 (Tserkov Rizpolozheniya) left to see. Having seen the Kremlin, drop in the Alexander Garden (Aleksandrovsky Sad) and see the changing of the guard by the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. If you are still not tired enough, go to the Red Square again. Make it inside the Cathedral of St. Basil the Blessed. It is much more spectacular on the outside, however, than in the inside. And, yeah, pop into the GUM mall. No need to buy anything in the numerous boutiques there; however, buying an ice-cream made to the old soviet recipe is a must.

3 Day three

The way you spend it depends somewhat on the season. In summer, go to the Proletarskaya metro station and, having walked a couple hundred metres, take a cruiser at the river station by the Novospassky Bridge. Half an hour later, having sailed along the Kremlin and the Cathedral of Christ the Saviour, get off at the Gorky Park8. You will enjoy fine grass lawns, comfortable benches, free Wi-Fi, cheap fast food, rented bicycles and other enjoyments. You can actually stay the whole day in there (especially, if there is some interesting exposition at the Garage Museum). But if you’ve had enough, there is Museum on the opposite side across the Krymsky Val Street, which is a curious open-air museum park, where they installed demolished monuments to soviet leaders, including the very statue of Dzerzhinsky from Lubyanka. This option will not suit in winter (although special cruisers sail along the Moskva River even in winter). But don’t let things get you down. There are two museums in Moscow which are a must: the Tretyakov Gallery7 and the Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts8. An inexperienced tourist would argue that seeking two museums in one day is too much. An experienced tourist would use a secret method: he or she will go to the museum to see just one masterpiece. This could be, for instance, The Trinity by Rublev in the Tretyakov Gallery and The Blue Dancers by Dega in the Pushkin Museum. In this case you will be able to get an impression about the museum and will not be confused with too many paintings.

If going to a museum is not for you, shopping would be your option. See the main shopping places in Moscow are.
For many years, in the atmosphere of an old noble mansion on Tverskoy Boulevard, the legendary Moscow restaurant Pushkin Café has been welcoming its guests and offering cuisine of old Russian nobility. This is the place where any newly arrived foreigner is taken to dine. The restaurant was opened on 6 June 1999.

This restaurant, ironically named «Mari Vanna» (which is colloquial of «Maria Ivanovna»), is ideally suited for a surprise: you will have to guess what they are by their flavour and taste. By all means, first, you will be asked about any food allergies and your requirements. 4% discount for those who show this guide!

The ingredients of the dishes will remain a surprise, you will have to guess what they are by their flavour and taste. By all means, first, you will be asked about any food allergies and your religious restrictions. A session in the dark takes 1.5-2 hours. Apart from the «Dark Room», the restaurant has two light rooms, a bar and a summer patio, «Dark Room» has two light rooms, a bar and a summer patio. In this tea house you can enjoy vintage Chinese tea and taste over 100 kinds of sauces.

» The first modern Chinese restaurant in Moscow was founded by Alexander Rappoport, a known attorney, cookery specialist and caterer. This cuisine is special in that phenomenal taste is achieved with little thermal processing of the food and very limited use of sauces.

Come to Noev Kovech restaurant to have a meal in a 19th century mansion, which immediately takes its guests into the atmosphere of luxury and hospitality. Similar to its better-known fellow restaurant Pushkin, Oblomov reproduces in every little detail the interior and the culinary traditions of the «golden age» of the Russian upper class. Food is prepared here in a genuine Russian furnace to the recipes of the 19th century, traditional tea ceremonies with a samovar (fire pot) are held every Friday.

The menu includes only those dishes that Russians traditionally consider to be home cuisine.

Crocus City Oceanarium
Three floors of unbelievable adventures along salt and fresh water exposions and an interactive excursion to the Jungle garden are waiting for you here. You will see tropical fish and animals, inhabitants of cold seas, some terrestrial mammals and exotic plants. Under the guidance of Oceanarium instructors, you can make a dive down to 5 metres to see underwater creatures within arm’s reach.

Moscow Zoo
The Moscow Zoo was opened back in 1864 and became the first establishment of its kind in Russia. Nowadays, it has several thematic zones, where animals of around 1,100 species from all continents comfortably live, 50% of which are exotic or rare species. Both adults and children invariably love the thematic sections «House of primates», «Terrarium», «Tropical cats» and «Children zoo». The zoo is especially proud of its pavilion «Exotarium», where the beautiful world of a coral reef has been carefully recreated.

Big Circus on Prospekt Vernadskogo
This is the largest permanent circus in Europe, which can hold up to 3,300 visitors at a time. The Big Moscow Circus led by the famous Zapashny brothers has taken its well-deserved place among the world's leading circus venues. Every season, a new grand performance is prepared here with the participation of honored and People's artists of Russia, award winners of international circus festivals and representatives of renowned circus dynasties.

Moscow Nikulin’s Circus on Tsvetnoy Boulevard
This is the oldest circus in Moscow, which can be proud not only of its 130-year history but also of its performances of invariably high quality. Such legendary artists as Oleg Popov, Yury Nikulin, Karandashev and Leonid Engibarov all starred here once. This is the place where the representatives of the most respected Russian circus dynasties perform. Today, the Circus on Tsvetnoy Boulevard continues the glorious traditions of Russian circus, at a modern high-tech level.

Obraztsov’s Puppet Theatre
Right from the time when it was first opened back in 1931, this world's largest puppet theatre has become a true cultural landmark of Moscow. Several generations of Muscovites grew up on the performances staged here based on classical pieces of literature, folk and literary fairy tales. Its list of productions always includes both the legendary performances staged by the theatre’s founder Sergey Obraztsov and modern pieces of puppet art.

The offer is valid until 26 August. For more information about the participating stores go to the webpage http://www.riviera.center/events/306
Best viewing points in Moscow

Viewing platform in the Imperia Tower
The best viewing point in Moscow is located in the 60-storey Imperia skyscraper. On the 58th floor of the gigantic building, there is a panoramic viewing platform, where exciting excursions take place every hour. The Imperia Tower is located near the Vystavochnaya metro station and in a walking distance from the Mezhdunarodnaya metro station. You can get here from the Afimall City Shopping Centre: first, go to the 2nd floor and then follow the signs to the Southern entrance in the Imperia Tower. Tickets are available at the Reception desk.

Observation deck on Sparrow Hills
This is the most popular viewing point in Moscow, which was opened back in 1953, at the same time with the neighbouring new building of the Moscow State University. From the 80-metre height, you can enjoy postcard views over the Luzhniki Stadium, the «Moscow-City» skyscrapers, Stalinist skyscrapers, the Ostankino TV tower, the Peter the Great Statue and the Kremlin belfries and towers. You can use one of the powerful zoom binoculars here free of charge. The walk from the Vorobyovy Gory metro station (exit to Sparrow Hills) to the observation deck takes around 20 minutes.

Bagration Pedestrian Bridge and Shopping Mall
This is a futuristic bridge that connects Krasnopresnenskaya Embankment and the «Moscow-City» business cluster, which is a mix of a pedestrian artery and a shopping mall. At the lower level there are numerous boutiques, cafes and restaurants while the upper level is an observation platform with an excellent view over the business centre of Moscow. The main hall of the bridge decorated with the famous sculpture by Ernst Neizvestny «The Tree of Life» is only 100 metres away from the nearest metro station Vystavochnaya.

Viewing platforms in the Ostankino TV Tower
Muscovites believe that the viewing platforms located on two levels in the Ostankino TV Tower are the best places to see all the sights of Russia's main city at a glance. In fine weather, from the 340-metre height, you can see Moscow in plain sight without any optical devices. To get to the Ostankino TV Tower, take trolleybus No. 13, 15 (bus stop «Akademika Korolyova Street»), 9 or 37 (bus stop «Excursion Block of the TV Tower») from the VDNH metro station or use the Moscow single rail road (station «TV Centre»). The ride takes around 20 minutes.

Riviera Shopping Mall

Riviera Shopping Mall is a new lifestyle centre, which opened in April last year. It welcomes all Muscovites and Moscow guests to have great time in the atmosphere of unlimited shopping, to get ready for the summer season and to enjoy the most up-to-date entertainments. Riviera Shopping Mall is well located on the Third Transport Ring (TTR), one of Moscow’s main highways. The shopping mall offers popular brand stores, entertainments of various kinds for children and adults, as well as cafés and restaurants with a breathing view over the Moskva River. You can go to Zara, UNIQLO or Reiss to buy perfect denim clothes; to Love Republic or H&M to find a feminine dress; or to the Family department store to buy clothes for your entire family. Fans of active lifestyle can go to Decathlon sport hypermarket to check on new collections of sports apparel. Throughout the summer, Riviera guests can participate in a sales promotion where you can win a valuable prize by doing shopping.

TSUM Department Store

TSUM Department Store, located in the heart of Moscow, is the only high-end department store in Russia, which meets luxury shopping standards. TSUM offers its customers jewelry, watches, perfumery and cosmetics collections and more than a thousand of famous fashion brands provided with lower prices than in Europe. There are also restaurant and the first Russian Apple Shop.

Tsvetnoy Central Market

Tsvetnoy Central Market is a special place for Muscovites, which reflects the interests of the inhabitants of a modern metropolitan city, reflects popular trends and makes up an integral part of their lives. The mall combines premium brands and collections presented by young and talented fashion designers. You can find here clothing, footwear, accessories, cosmetics and perfumes, decorative items and household appliances, as well as a Food Market with restaurants!

Evropeisky Shopping Centre

The unusually looking triangular building of the shopping centre accommodates 8 stores and an underground parking. The building has several entrances, including one directly from the metro station. Visitors can go to 250 shops selling clothes and footwear, 30 cosmetics and perfumery shops, 70 shops offering accessories and jewellery, 50 sports and children shops, and 100 shops selling household products, equipment and furs.

Eliseevskiy Grocery Store
- 14, Tverskaya Street
- Tverskaya, Pushkinskaya, Chekhovskaya
- Open 24/7
- www.eliseevskiy.ru
The famous Eliseevskiy grocery store was opened back in 1901 and is still considered to be the first one in Moscow. The store has museum-like neo-baroque interiors and a rich collection of products, which are all of Russian origin. Eliseevskiy offers a richest range of food products, ready-to-eat meals, various made-in Russia souvenirs, and handmade products.

Historic Moscow

Tverskaya Street
While Red Square is rightly called «the heart of Moscow», Tverskaya Street, which comes to Red Square from the north-west, is thought to be the main transport artery of Russia's capital. Here you can see the best samples of the Stalinist Empire style, which, according to experts, are the most expensive properties in Moscow. It is best to start seeing Tverskaya not from where it begins, at the Mayakovskaya metro station, but from the famous Pushkin Square, where the Tverskaya and Pushkinskaya metro stations come to.

Partiarch Ponds
This is a small park located at the intersection of Ermolaevsky Lane and Malaya Bronnaya Street. It is a unique historic artefact incarnating the spirit of Old Moscow. The old-time pond has made it into the world literature owing to the immortal novel «The Master and Margarita» by Mikhail Bulgakov. Now there is a monument here dedicated to the famous writer and Mikhail Bulgakov's memorial house and theatre on the neighbouring Bolshaya Sadovaya Street.

Izmailovsky Kremlin
The «Kremlin» originated from the legendary Izmailovo Vernissage, one of the most famous street art fairs in Moscow. Although the construction of this museum and entertainment complex was finished as late as in 2007, the Kremlin immediately became one of Moscow's most notable historic sights. This architectural complex is a replica of the Czar's estate in Izmailovo and has been recreated in greatest detail based on original drawings and engravings of the 16-17th centuries.

Stoleshnikov Lane
This is a pedestrian zone going from Tverskaya Square to Petrovka Street and is believed to be the most luxurious street in the Old Moscow. After the collapse of the USSR, expensive shops and boutiques of leading Western brands such as Christian Dior, Hermes, Louis Vuitton, Cartier and Chanel took fancy of this street. Stoleshnikov picked up from Kuznetsky Most Street the title of Moscow's fashion centre and has ranked among the most expensive shopping streets on the planet.

Pyatnitskaya Street
This is one of the oldest streets in Moscow, which has been known as the centre of merchantry of the Zamoskvorechye District from the 18th century. Pyatnitskaya Street has preserved its unique historic appearance up to our time. After a recent renovation, its pavements were expanded, bicycle paths were added and the façades of churches, tenement buildings and merchant mansions were all redone. And now Pyatnitskaya ranks among the most popular tourist streets in the Old Moscow.

Sheremetyevo skilled personnel provide first-class services and create a pleasant atmosphere to make your stay here comfortable. We hope that you will like it here!

You have arrived

You can get to the city by public transport or by taxi. See details on pages 4.

Following the navigation information available in the terminals, you can come to the railway terminal Aeroexpress to go to the centre of Moscow (Belorussky Railway Station) by an express train in 35 minutes. You can rent a car. Book a car on svo.aero or at the rent-a-car stands in Terminal D (1st floor).

A porter can help you get your luggage to the car. This is a paid-for service. Delivery of one luggage piece costs from ₽210. If you prefer to continue your trip without your suitcases, order a special luggage taxi. It will deliver your belongings to a place and at a time indicated by you. You can book the delivery in the «lost and found» offices (on the 1st floor in Terminal E). The delivery within Moscow (including up to three luggage pieces) costs ₽P300. To make a stop en route you can stay in one of the hotels located near the airport terminals (page 16).

You can have yourself fixed up after a long flight in a beauty shop (Terminal Aeroexpress), where you can have a fashionable hairdo, manicure or pedicure done. You can relieve distress in a massage parlour or beauty shop – you can treat yourself sometimes.

If you are used to personal treatment, fast-track in before- and after-flight formalities, personal escort to the aircraft and other premium services, use the airport VIP-lounge. You can use a VIP-lounge only once or you can enter into a long-term corporate contract. VIP-lounges are located in all terminals.

For the convenience of passengers and guests of the airport, there are water fountains in the terminals. In the Duty Free Sheremetyevo zone, passengers can shop in numerous duty-free shops and enjoy the high-quality services and a wide range of products, including premium goods. Elegant jewellery made of gold, silver and precious stones, leather goods, exclusive accessories, latest perfumery and cosmetics – you can treat yourself sometimes.

For details see the website www.svo.aero or the mobile application of the Sheremetyevo airport for iOS and Android.

Already flying back?

If you want to return home or to another city at your convenience, you can do it by an express train, by taxi or by a special luggage taxi.

Getting back to Sheremetyevo, you can stay in one of the hotels located near the airport terminals (page 16). You can either walk to your terminal or save time and use an electric car. The ride costs ₽100 and is free for disabled passengers. Electric cars cruise around the entire Southern Terminal Complex (Terminals D, E and F) and you will have no trouble finding one.

On your way from one terminal to another, you can visit art galleries and enjoy the works of known photographers, visual artists and sculptors. If you have enough free time, call in to the unique Historical Museum of the Airport (5th floor, Terminal F, left elevator), in which you can see the precious history of the main air gate of Russia, which has been painstakingly restored. The entrance is free.

Moscow's most beautiful metro stations

Ploshchad Revolyutsii ●
A whole constellation of outstanding Soviet sculptors took part in creating this metro station. No wonder that the literalism of their creations continues to fascinate visitors decades later. People attribute even miraculous features to the statues of ordinary heroes of the Soviet epoch and have bright-polished some parts of the sculptures «to attract the luck».

Mayakovskaya ●
This art-deco architectural masterpiece rightfully claims the title of the most beautiful station of the Moscow underground. Sky-rocketing metal columns and domes decorated with mosaic panels leave an unforgettable impression on everybody who comes down here. Back in 1937, a year before its official opening, Mayakovskaya was awarded a prize at the World Exposition in Paris. Later, the station became one of Moscow's most popular touristic sights.

Taganskaya Ring ●
Arrow-type façades of the Taganskaya station resemble skyward cupolas of Gothic churches and at the same time the interiors of stone structures made in the Old Russian style. The ceramic panels decorating the station represent a visual excursion showing military branches of the Soviet Army during World War II.

Belorusskaya Ring ●
The Belorusskaya Ring metro station, which leads to the Belorussky Railway Station, not only is one of the busiest transportation hubs of Moscow but is also a true architectural decoration of the city. The ornament of the station shows the culture and life of Byelorussians. High cupolas resemble the domes of Old Roman villas and accommodate 12 mosaic panels made in the Florentine mosaic style, which show the life scenes of Belorussian people.

Vystavochnaya ●
This is one of the most modern stations of the Moscow metro and is an original transport hall of Expocentre, the main exposition venue of Russia's capital. This underground structure is made in the hi-tech style. On the second storey there is a photo gallery «Metro» and an interactive museum, which narrates about the past, present and future of the Moscow underground.
